

Stories of renewal

The future of the whole world is in our hands. If humans stop interfering with the environment and leave it alone, it will fully recover. Nature is resilient.

Following the Chernobyl nuclear plant meltdown, people said it would take 20,000 years for the environment to recover enough to once again support human life. But in 30 years a giant forest has engulfed the former city of Pripyat and has provided a home for once threatened species of wild life.

New Zealand and a number of other countries are now demarcating regions of surrounding ocean as marine sanctuaries, areas off-limits to human interference. These refuge sites reveal that in as little as five years, the environment and its animal life can make an amazing recovery. The New Zealand marine sanctuaries have 600% more life than the surrounding seas.

In 1883, the island of Krakatoa disappeared under pumice and ash from one of the largest volcanic eruptions in modern times. The new island covered with lava had no life on it. Three years later, the barren island was home to twenty-six species of mostly ferns and algae.

The first trees emerged eleven years later along with grass species that created a grassy savannah. By 1926, the formerly barren island was covered by a dense tropical jungle. In the short span of forty- three years, a lava-covered sterile environment was transformed into a thriving tropical forest ... all in the absence of human civilisation. We can learn to work in harmony with Nature rather than trying to dominate and control it.

The POWER of LOVE, GIFT and COMMUNITY.

The mainstream current financial system causes and perpetrates widespread moral injury. Money agreements are given value through storied belief agreements. At present these agreements are mostly an ego centred, dominating, competitive, greedy, selfish, unsustainable, mindset story.

It's time for new agreements about what we value. New Intentions.

“We are starving for spiritual nourishment. We are starving for a life that is personal, connected, and meaningful. By choice, that is where we will direct our energy. When we do so, community will arise anew because this spiritual nourishment can only come to us as a gift, as part of a web of gifts in which we participate as giver and receiver.”

...“When I speak of meeting our spiritual needs, It is to treat relationship, circulation, and material life itself as sacred. Because they are.”

Charles Eisenstein. Sacred Economics.

The destructive money story is transforming into a Life-giving NEW STORY of heart centred Visionary entrepreneurs who live well by doing good. For whom marketing is the communication of a contribution to a healthier, happier, lovingly supported and empowered world where there is a high purpose and meaning.

When relationships are enfolded in consciousness and each person is on a path to become more open and awake to the highest good for ALL Life, people give the utmost value by communicating their vision and gifting their contribution to the more Life giving world.

It seems we have to ‘un-know’ a bit every time we want to know in a new way. Light and darkness are complementary parts of the whole. It is only when we lose our certainties that we may wake up to the larger myth of colossal cultural significance.
